Dear Friends:

As the Arkansas Municipal League begins the 2010-2011 year, we must also reflect on the League's rich history. For the past 76 years we, as an organization, have much for which to be thankful. The leadership exhibited over these years has been continued through the service Fort Smith Vice Mayor Gary Campbell contributed as president of the League for the past year. Please take an opportunity to extend thanks to Gary for his leadership and commitment to all of our cities and towns. Our 76th Convention was a great success and was well attended. This success can be attributed to the wide range of information available to our membership, as well as the League's emphasis on providing leadership and development. Don and his staff assembled a Convention that provided both sharing and learning experiences for all those in attendance. For those who missed a particular session during the concurrent workshops, be sure to contact Ken Wasson, League assistant director, and let him know you would like to have another chance to attend a specific session. All of the sessions were outstanding. As I mentioned in Hot Springs, we will continue to emphasize economic development. In doing so, I want to encourage each of you to focus on developing unique opportunities for your local work force to succeed. I would like you to consider the following points: I have long believed that cities and towns have the responsibility to foster existing business and the opportunity to keep young people in their home towns. This enables the work force to stay in place where they have family, friends and a support network of encouragement. With today's communications networks there should be no reason an individual has to leave their home town in order to make a living wage.

221 124 241 124

Our federal and state budgets begin on July 1. With this new beginning comes a new opportunity to improve our communities. It is up to each of us to foster and create innovative community and economic projects that are ready to start immediately.

We have access to a number of nonprofit organizations and government agencies that provide technical expertise necessary to develop capacity building, identify funding sources and mobilize a community to carry out a goal. Take advantage of these resources.

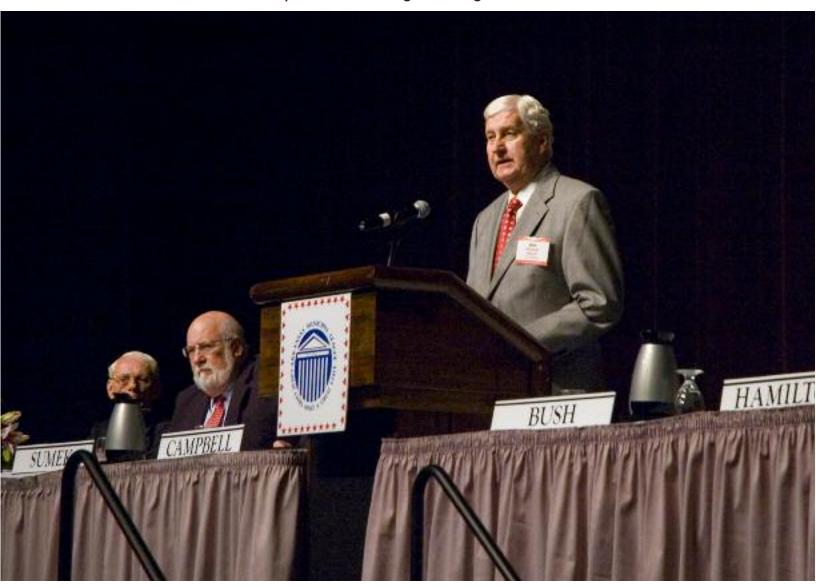

The opportunities for our future growth are unlimited for the state of Arkansas. I look forward to working for and with each of you to make our future the brightest it can be!

League preps for coming year at 76th Convention

By Andrew Morgan, League Staff

Hot Springs Mayor Mike Bush welcomes delegates to the 76th Convention. "Let's roll up our sleeves and address these challenges," Bush encouraged municipal leaders.

HOT SPRINGS—Ballot issues facing Arkansas voters in the coming November general election, the approaching 2011 legislative session and other issues facing cities and towns were up for discussion at the League's 76th Convention, held June 16-18 in Hot Springs.

Convention attendance was among the highest on record, with more than 1,300 attendees overall.

That number included 751 delegates representing 194 cities and towns. Participation by exhibitors at the Convention was also good. With 90 companies and agencies exhibiting, the Hot Springs Convention Center's exhibit hall was at near capacity. The number of exhibitors matches the record set at the 75th Convention in 2009.

November ballot initiatives big for cities

Roby Brock briefs the Convention on the races and issues in this "tsunami" of an election year.

In addition to many heated races for local, state and national positions, several ballot initiatives will come before Arkansas voters in November's general election that will impact how cities and towns do business. The League strongly supports two of the amendments on the ballot: the Interest Rate Amendment (issue No. 2 on the ballot) and the Amendment to Revise Amendment 82 (issue No. 3 on the ballot). Both amendments if passed would help Arkansas cities and the state as a whole to attract investment and promote job growth.

Even with the election still five months away, "it's been a crazy political year already," Arkansas political analyst Roby Brock told the Convention. Brock is founder and president of River Rock Communications and has regularly shared his insights into business and politics on local television and radio programs. "It's beyond earthquake," Brock said. "It's become a political tsunami in Arkansas this year."

In Washington, D.C., a change in Arkansas's leadership is almost inevitable, Brock said, especially with the retirement of both Reps. Marion Berry and Vic Snyder. Add to that the voters' apparent anti-incumbent, anti-Washington attitudes right now and we could see a major shake-up in our state's national leadership, Brock said, with Rep. John Boozman gunning for Sen. Blanche Lincoln's seat in the U.S. Senate, a strong challenge to Rep. Mike Ross by Beth Ann Rankin in District 4, and open congressional seats for Districts 1, 2 and 3. Positions in the state Legislature are also up for grabs in districts across the state.

Of the amendments on the ballot, issue No. 2, the Interest Rate Amendment, will affect cities and towns the most, Brock said. The "catch-all amendment" is designed to increase local governments' abilities to fund capital improvement projects by eliminating constitutional limits on interest rates for government bonds and loans, revising interest rate limits on other loans and authorizing the financing of energy savings projects. Due to its perceived complexity, the League and others who support the amendment may have a challenge selling it, Brock warned. We will need to simplify the message, he said, and use good examples of why the change is needed.

Issue No. 3 on the ballot, the amendment to Amendment 82 (commonly known as the Super Project Amendment, which passed in 2004), also may affect cities and towns, Brock said, by giving the Legislature more flexibility to authorize big economic development projects.

Brock also told the Convention to keep an eye on proposed Amendment No. 4, which is currently still in the petition gathering process but could very well end up on the ballot. The amendment seeks to prevent illegal aliens from receiving certain public benefits. The amendment mirrors some existing federal law, Brock said. He also warned that it would be an additional burden on local governments, who would be tasked with tracking, reporting and other "cumbersome paperwork for you guys."

Resolutions, Policies and Goals 2010-2011 adopted

North Little Rock Alderman Murry Witcher, League first vice president, presides during the meeting of the Resolutions Committee.

The Resolutions Committee, made up of a designated representative from each member city and town, met twice at the 76th Convention to discuss and approve resolutions for the year and the package that will be the League's Policies and Goals 2010-2011 as voted on by the Convention at the annual business meeting on Friday, June 18. The Convention approved several amendments clarifying and expanding the League's standing policies and goals on issues such as public safety. The Convention also included new language in Section 6 regarding personnel, administration and employee relations that reflects the League's opposition to federally mandated collective bargaining, which, though it has failed in the past, is back on the table before Congress.

The Convention passed a package of 20 resolutions for the year, including resolutions supporting consistency among state election laws, giving cities and towns the means to properly regulate local farmers' markets, supporting education and training for municipal officials and more.

The Convention renewed its commitment to push for the passage of the proposed amendment to the Arkansas Constitution eliminating limits on interest rates for government bonds and loans. The League had worked during the 87th General Assembly in 2009 to pass legislation to that effect. The Legislature ultimately referred the matter to the voters. The Interest Rate Amendment will appear on November's general election ballot as Issue No. 2.

Look for the complete Policies and Goals 2010-2011 to be included as an insert in the August issue of City & Town.

Cities' unity benefits state

Gov. Mike Beebe, speaking at the Convention's opening night banquet, praised cities and towns for their unified stance on issues that affect the state as a whole. The League's united front "changes public policy in this state," Beebe said. "You change it for the better."Beebe, as a legislator, as the state's

Gov. Beebe calls for a united front at the opening night banquet.

Attorney General and now as Governor, has long been a friend of the League and has over the years supported many of the League's initiatives. He recalled the crisis in the early 1980s when the Arkansas Supreme Court ruled that the recently granted local option sales tax was unconstitutional, comparing the tense situation to the Cuban Missile Crisis. In the 11th hour the Court reversed its decision. "You're still benefiting today," Beebe said.

"Present folks with the honest facts," Beebe urged city leaders. You can change policies that adversely affect your communities through "honesty, a little bit of courage, and a whole lot of unity," Beebe said.

Arkansas Attorney General Dustin McDaniel

Local leadership is essential, Attorney General Dustin McDaniel told delegates.

thanked the municipal leaders who made the effort to be present at the Convention, especially now when times are tough both economically and because of citizen malaise and dissatisfaction. "Your attendance here shows your commitment," McDaniel said.

Frustration, sadness and fear are dominating public discourse, McDaniel said. The oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico has become a metaphor for what's wrong with the country. "It has us asking, 'Why can't we just fix the hole?'" McDaniel said.

Local leadership is more important now than ever, McDaniel said, and told delegates that Arkansas is different and better "and don't let anyone tell you different." We're attracting business, we've cut taxes, our schools are improving and we're operating in the black, one of only four or five states to do so, he said. The rest of the country will soon be looking to Arkansas to see how we've done it, McDaniel said.

League finances strong, Executive Director reports

Zimmerman

HOT SPRINGS—The League's optional programs and the organization's overall finances have had a strong year, Executive Director Don Zimmerman reported at the June 18 annual business meeting, held on the final day of the 76th Convention. The stability is expected to continue during the next year, Zimmerman said.

For the first time in five years, membership was not at 100 percent at the time of the annual Convention, Zimmerman said. All but one of the state's 500 municipalities were League members. Zimmerman hoped to bring the one outstanding town back into the League within a few weeks, he said.

Overall the League's optional programs are in very sound financial shape and received clean audits for the year from Thomas & Thomas LLP. "Overall you are strong, and you have great management," auditor Randy Milligan told Convention delegates.

The Municipal Legal Defense Program has 426 members—six more than in 2009—and is handling about 150 ongoing cases. The Municipal Vehicle Program has 388 members—three more than last year.

The Municipal Health Benefit Fund, with 201 members, experienced a growth spurt this year with 10 more members than last year.

The Municipal League Workers' Compensation Trust has 487 members—three more than last year. The Municipal Property Program has 256 members—five more than last year. Both of these programs turn 25 this year. The League began the programs in the early 1980s when cities began having trouble getting affordable coverage through insurance companies, Zimmerman said. "They weren't there for you," Zimmerman told city and town leaders. "Now they're back, but they'll have to compete. The League's programs will be there for you."

The Cash Management, Pension Management and Municipal Other Post Employment Benefits Trust programs have 41 members—six more than last year. The Non-CDL drug testing program has 97 members—five more than last year. The League's ordinance codification service has 108 participants—four more than last year.

Two optional programs saw membership drop this year. The Accidental Death and Dismemberment Program has 169 members—four less than last year. The Volunteer Firefighters Supplemental Income Program has 216 members—39 less than last year.

Three municipalities—Bryant, Bull Shoals and Lake Village—participate in all 10 of the League's optional programs. Two municipalities last year—Jennette and Midway—did not participate in any optional programs.

Zimmerman thanked the Executive Committee, boards and advisory councils for their hard work during the year. He praised the leadership of 2009-2010 League President Gary Campbell, vice mayor of Fort Smith. "He's been a real credit to the League and a credit to the state of Arkansas," Zimmerman said. Campbell was instrumental in bringing a new focus on economic development to the League, and he has encouraged more participation in the National League of Cities, he said. Campbell, who is a member of the NLC's Community and Economic Development Steering Committee, hosted a meeting of the group in Fort Smith, and he helped convince the NLC to hold its recent NLC-RISC meeting in Little Rock. The participants loved visiting Arkansas, Zimmerman said. "They were truly impressed."

Delegates at the annual business meeting voted to accept the nominations of the League's new slate of 2010-2011 officers, and delegates passed the package of resolutions submitted by the Resolutions Committee. It's an "aggressive package" of resolutions, Zimmerman said, and our resolutions supporting ballot issues No. 2 and No. 3 in November's general election are especially important.

"It's going to be a challenge to get these passed in November," Zimmerman said. "I think they will pass. Arkansas is truly an up and coming state, and a large part of that is because of the work you do."

Workshops offer insights on variety of municipal issues

HOT SPRINGS—The League offered 21 concurrent workshops at the 76th Convention to give city and town leaders an opportunity to discuss a wide variety of issues facing municipalities, including land use, economic development, public safety, animal control, emergency preparedness and more.

In the workshop "Developments and Changes in Financing Capital Improvements," League Finance Director Paul Young and finance experts from Morgan Keegan and the Arkansas Development Finance Authority outlined the challenges facing municipalities trying to fund major projects through bonds. The drop in long-term tax exempt bond rates and the now even lower Federal Discount Rate—it's hovering near zero—has severely restricted cities' ability to finance capital improvement projects, Young explained. What if you wanted to buy a house, he asked as an example, and your only option was five-year financing. "You couldn't buy much of a house," Young said.

To correct the financing issue, the League strongly supports the passage of the Interest Rate Amendment, which will be issue No. 2 on the general election ballot in November. The amendment would eliminate limits on interest rates for government bonds and loans, allowing cities to more easily finance projects. It's essential that the League and its member cities and towns get the word out to the voters on this issue. "If we don't get this passed, we'll be basically backed out of business," Young warned.

In another finance-focused workshop, "The Safety of Bank Deposits, Current FDIC Rules and Collateralization," state banking experts shared insights on keeping cities' bank deposits safe and ensuring liquidity.

Arkansas is blessed to not have huge bank problems like several other states, said Jim Franks, executive vice president of Arkansas Bankers' Bank. It's still very important for cities and towns to pay attention to their banks, statements, ratings and other information. "Know who the heck you're doing business with," Franks said.

In the workshop "Utilizing Technology at City Hall," Cabot Mayor Eddie Joe Williams shared various portions of the city's cutting edge Web site. The city's goal was to create a site utilizing technology that would ultimately save the city money, he said. When he first took office, Cabot's accounts couldn't cover payroll. Four years later, the city now has a $3.35 million surplus, the mayor boasted. He attributed a portion of that surplus directly to the city's recent technological improvements, which have increased productivity and reduced time to process applications, purchase orders, permits and more.

In a related workshop, "The New Social Media and Your Municipality," city leaders, economic development and communications professionals exchanged ideas on how to best form online communities with popular online social media sites such as Facebook (www.facebook.com), Twitter (www.twitter.com) and blogs. Social media provides a unique platform for user-generated content, and the interactive nature of these kinds of Web sites also easily allows for feedback from constituents and other "voter-generated content." City and town leaders were cautioned to implement policies fitting their municipalities before venturing into the world of social media.

In the workshop "Planning, Zoning and Other Land Use Issues," planning experts and city leaders strongly recommended that cities organize a planning commission. It should be a strong body, one that doesn't just recommend but acts. The group must know local and state land use laws and gain the trust of elected officials.

Arkadelphia Police Chief Al Harris had the opportunity to share his city's success in the workshop "Maximizing Vehicle Performance and Reducing Accidents." Arkadelphia recently purchased 10 hybrid police vehicles with the help of a USDA grant and has seen significant savings as a result.

Healthier leaders and employees mean better cities, and the workshop "Why Wellness Matters" covered the many benefits of maintaining good health and what cities are doing to fight chronic diseases and promote healthy diets and physical activity.

Summaries of attorney general opinions

Recent opinions that affect municipal government in Arkansas

From the Office of Attorney General Dustin McDaniel

Cities may operate hospital jointly, enact sales taxes individually

Opinion: 2010-019 Requestor: Miller, Paul—State Senator Under ACA 25-20-101 et seq. (the Interlocal Cooperation Act), can a certain group of cities pass a sales tax to supplement (1) the building and (2) operation of the hospital? RESPONSE: I am unsure about how to interpret your questions. You may be asking about cities in the abstract or about the specific cities you mention. I can only respond to the former. Whether any particular city can pass these kinds of taxes depends on the other taxes the city has levied. Each city should consult its counsel to determine whether it can levy such a tax. In my opinion, with respect to the abstract question, cities may jointly agree to construct and operate a public hospital. And they may, individually, enact sales taxes to supplement the construction and operation of the hospital.

Amendment 7 guides local option elections

Opinion: 2010-050 Requestor: Key, Johnny—State Senator Under Arkansas law, what is the relevant period for filing petitions calling for a local option election regarding the sale of alcoholic beverages for a precinct in a wet county? RESPONSE: "[N]ot less than ninety (90) calendar days nor more than one hundred twenty (120) calendar days" before the election, in accordance with ACA 14-14-915(b)(1), as amended by Act 1480 of 2009. As explained in the Opinion, Article 5, Section 1 of the Arkansas Constitution does not itself definitively fix the time for filing. Rather, it sets the range within which the General Assembly may fix the last permissible date for filing. The statute governing local option elections, ACA 3-8-204, requires that petitions be filed in the manner provided for by "Amendment 7, and enabling acts pertaining thereto." This is a general reference statute, and as such it incorporates subsequent modifications of Amend. 7's enabling legislation.

State health director may add K2 to controlled substance list if conditions met

Opinion:	2010-077
Requestor:	Hutchinson, Donna—State
	Representative

Does the Director of the Department of Health have authority under ACA 5-64-201-216, to adopt an emergency rule to place K2 among the state's listed controlled substances? RESPONSE: This depends upon the requisite findings under ACA 5-64-201, part of the Uniform Controlled Substances Act. As a general matter, the answer is yes if the necessary findings are made and all applicable procedures are followed. This requires factual determinations. See Opinion for full discussion.

Integrity-Driven Cities: How to Win the Battle for Trust

By Randy G. Pennington

"We don't trust them."

Those were the words used by a group of concerned citizens to describe how they felt about their elected officials. Only months earlier, the same officials had used the phrase to describe their colleagues on the City Council who did not share their views on a controversial subject. On another front, the city staff wondered if Council could be trusted to support them as they stepped up enforcement of code violations, and several Council members privately discussed their concerns that staff might not be giving them all the information they needed to make the best decisions.

The absence of trust is the friction that prevents individuals and groups from working together toward a common cause. It causes people to question everything and believe nothing. The result is everyone protecting their own self-interests to the detriment of the community's greater needs.

Feelings of mistrust spring from questions about character, competency, consistency, communication, and courage. Is this person withholding information? Is that person competent to make a good decision? Why is there inconsistency between word and deed? Did that person lie to me to gain an unfair benefit, or was it a simple mistake? Will this group have the political will to support publicly what they have acknowledged privately?

Is mistrust a problem in your city?

You decide. What would be different if everyone involved in making, influencing, and implementing decisions in our city could be trusted to do what they were supposed to do, when they were supposed to do it, and the way it is supposed to be done? If the difference would be noticeable, you have a problem.

Here's the news: the issues facing communities today are more challenging and potentially divisive than at any time in recent memory. Logic dictates that not everyone will agree on every decision. Our responsibility demands that the citizens we serve and colleagues with whom we interact, both elected and appointed, have the right to trust us. Your community cannot afford the distraction that occurs when others doubt your integrity.

What is Integrity

For many, the word integrity is synonymous with ethics. That is a critical piece of it, but integrity goes beyond personal or organizational character to include competence and consistency.

Webster's New World Dictionary defines integrity as, "the quality or state of being complete; wholeness; the quality or state of being unimpaired; and being of sound moral principle."

Leaders and organizations adopting this broader definition deliver integrity in their products, services, and relationships. They:

•make every decision on the basis of what's right rather than who's right

- provide quality services and embrace continuous improvement in all performance areas because it is their obligation to those they serve
- maintain a culture where ethical behavior and doing what is right is expected and rewarded
- operate in an open, transparent manner with all constituencies
- deliver on promises (implied and explicit) to all constituent groups
- comply with the spirit of applicable regulations rather than the minimum requirements
- ensure accountability for integrity at every level of the organization

As a result, they experience...

- enhanced reputation
- the ability to openly discuss substantive issues without fear of reprisal
- · increased morale, commitment, and productivity
- improved resource utilization
- confidence in compliance with laws and regulations
- more effective response to crisis situations

How Integrity-Driven Leaders and Organizations are Different

All great leaders create focus with clear goals and high expectations. They expect results, and they ensure effective execution of well-designed strategies. Integrity-driven leaders simply approach their leadership responsibilities from a different perspective.

Their power comes from trust rather than fear. They pay attention to relationships as well as results, and they stress credibility rather than control. As a result, they generate confidence from others instead of skepticism and cynicism.

Stephen Carter asserts in his book, Integrity, that we admire integrity in our leaders because of their forthrightness, steadfastness, consistency, compassion, and the reliability of their commitments.

Leaders, organizations, and communities operating with a heightened sense of integrity are no less focused on results. They simply understand that short-term results without the long-term trust from all stakeholders create an environment where on-going success is not sustainable.

That makes the quest for integrity – as defined by Webster – the most important goal to which every community can aspire.

Making Integrity a Way of Life

A decision to make integrity the cornerstone of your organization's operation begins with the leader and is driven throughout the organization by performance and execution. Here are seven strategies to help you start and continue your journey.

1. State your expectations clearly. Everyone must understand your expectations and their contribution to driving integrity through every aspect of your operation. Communicate in an open, honest manner so everyone knows their obligation to citizens and each other. Avoid hype. Admit that you are constantly working on your own performance, and ask for everyone's commitment to becoming a city that demonstrates integrity in word and deed.

2. Pay attention to structure and processes. Structure and systems create habits that ensure consistency when human breakdowns occur. A seminar participant made the case for aligning structure and processes with these words, "how do they expect us to trust them when the policies say one thing, but we are asked to do something different every day."

Everything is ultimately connected. The integrity of the whole is called into questions when we see inconsistencies among the various parts. Less than transparent governance on one issue influences attitudes and perceptions on every issue. Allowing disrespectful treatment of employees in one area eventually affects other areas. Each area of the operation should be evaluated by the following questions: Are we doing what we said we would do? Are we providing what we said we would provide? Are we operating in a manner that builds trust with those we serve?

3. Create accountability and rewards. Acting with integrity must mean something. Deal quickly with those who violate the organization's standards. And remember that fear of consequences can also create an environment where individuals work to avoid getting caught. Make honoring commitments and the ability to build trust among diverse groups a criterion for promotion. Recognize and reward those who demonstrate their integrity in a difficult situation, even when the result is not as you would have hoped. Behavior that is recognized is repeated.

4. Provide the skills and tools to put principles into practice. Even the best system can malfunction or be improved. People create systems, and good intentions can go awry when either skills or tools are absent. Start with the Council and city leadership. Then move through the entire organization.

5. Talk about integrity often. How often do you speak about your organization's key performance results and budget? How often do you speak about the importance of integrity in your long-term success? Hanging a values statement on the wall and distributing wallet cards are not enough. Very few take the time to stand in the hallway or search their wallets to read the values statement when they face a difficult choice. Don't start a new program. Create stories and legends about those who achieved superior results while modeling integrity. Talk about the challenges of earning and maintaining the trust of others. The more attention leaders give to the importance of integrity, the more important it will become in the organization.

6. Welcome bad news. The test of a healthy organization is not the absence of problems. It is the ability to address them in a positive manner. The permission to share bad news without fear of retribution promotes an honest, open environment that continually strives to improve. As good as your organization is today; there is a strong chance that someone is withholding information that can make it even better.

7. Don't forget personal leadership. Leadership is about the ability to influence. Nothing more and nothing less. Leadership has very little to do with position and everything to do with your ability to influence others. Everyone is watching. They judge the sincerity of your actions very quickly and will take their support elsewhere unless they see integrity in your performance.

All leadership begins with personal leadership. Ralph Waldo Emerson once said of a guest, "The louder he spoke of his honor, the faster we counted our spoons." That statement is as relevant today as it was when it was first made in 1860. Who we are – at our core – matters just as much as the ability to communicate, make good decisions, or implement sound practices.

The great American statesman Henry Clay said, "Government is a trust, and the officers of government are trustees, and both the trust and the trustees are created for the benefit of the people."

The continued success and survival of our municipal organizations and communities as a whole depends on creating relationships. There can be no transformation without trust, and no trust without integrity.

The Religious Land Use and Insitiutionalized Persons Act

It ain't that old-time religion anymore.

By Jim von Tungeln

kay. You just returned from this year's Municipal League convention and the heat, fellowship, and education have you bushed. You want to relax and let the city run itself. After all, it seems at times to operate best that way.

Then you get a call from your favorite citizen complainer. She breathlessly explains that one of those modern churches has announced that it is expanding its ministry to include a mini-NASCAR racetrack, seating 10,000, to be built in the middle of her neighborhood and operate between the hours of 8 p.m. and midnight—daily.

Can you do something about it? Certainly. The area isn't zoned for such things. There isn't available parking or supporting streets. And what does auto racing have to do with religion, anyway? The city will get it stopped. Don't be so sure.

Welcome to the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act (RLUIPA.) Surprisingly, a number of folks, even some attorneys, didn't know about the law. It seems like it was only passed yesterday but it was actually 2000. Believe it or not, it has placed a great deal of legal doubt as to whether a city may, in fact, prevent such a situation as described above. Well, maybe it could but it is an extremely complicated and tortuous process and will require legal guidance—from an attorney and not from an urban planner. We can't give legal advice.

Accordingly, Mike Mosley of the League's legal staff furnished legal oversight, input, and assistance in this column. My aim is simply to present this important legislation to you from a planner's view and offer some insights into this important legislation.

This seems to be one of those congressional acts honestly created to correct problems. As sometimes happens, though, the demon of in-artful wording (don't forget "reasonable accommodations") arose from the depths of perdition to ignite the Law of Unintended Consequences. Supposedly designed to prevent municipalities from making life tough for one particular religion, it makes life tougher for every city that enacts zoning.

Creators of the act say that it is benign and doesn't exempt churches from local zoning laws. The act applies only to land use (and prisons) and simply does a few important things. They say.

First, it prevents infringement of religious exercise. Section 2(a) bars a zoning restriction that imposes a "substantial burden" on the religious exercise of a person or institution, unless the government can show that it has a "compelling interest" for imposing the restriction and that the restriction is the least restrictive way for the government to further that interest.

So the church mentioned at the beginning has already purchased the land and hired folks to design their racetrack and there is no other site in the city that will work for the purpose of teaching young folks spirituality through speed. Hmm.

Next the act provides that religious institutions must be treated similarly to comparable secular institutions. Section 2(b)(1) is known as the "equal terms" provision.

So, consider our racetrack. It seems that the city has already allowed a noisy soccer complex with similar hours to be constructed in the same vicinity. Hmm, again.

Next, the act bars discrimination among religions in Section 2(b)(2). This one seems pretty reasonable on its face. Never mind that we have religions in our country that preach hatred, espouse racial wars, promote terrorism, exercise gender discrimination, or offer 14-year-old girls to middle-aged men for sexual purposes.

Next, RLUIPA provides in Section 2(b)(3)(A) that "No government shall impose or implement a land use regulation that totally excludes religious assemblies from a jurisdiction." No problem with that one, but I must exercise a point of personal privilege and say that I once, years ago, received a call from an elected official who wanted to do just that. Sorry to say, I did offer legal advice on that occasion.

Would denial of an on-site weapons range constitute a substantial burden on this group's exercise of religion?

Finally, Section 2(b)(3)(B) provides: "No government shall impose or implement a land use regulation that unreasonably limits religious assemblies, institutions, or structures within a jurisdiction." How this provision alone doesn't effectively grant churches immunity from local zoning laws is a matter for finer minds than mine to argue.

The foregoing is an overview. Saying that it describes the legal intricacies of RLUIPA is like saying that "Psycho" is a movie about a woman who gets killed in a motel.

The law has been challenged but so far has only made it to some federal district courts and fewer federal appeals courts that have ruled all over the map with it. To date the major provisions interpreted by the federal courts have not been ruled upon by the United States Supreme Court.

Space and a lack of legal knowledge prevent much more than lifting the lid on this can of legal worms. Suffice it to say that much has been written about what constitutes a "substantial burden." Believe it or not, in many cases the courts that have interpreted the law don't agree.

There is another big problem. Courts may impose, in deciding RLUIPA cases, the standard of "strict scrutiny." This is the requirement that the city must show a compelling governmental interest and that the land use regulation is narrowly tailored to further that interest. Don't worry about the intricacies of the term; just know that municipalities almost never prevail in cases involving this standard.

In the example cited at the beginning, it is true that the activity desired for location—the one being regulated—has to constitute an "exercise of religion." Have no fear; the plaintiff's attorney will cite a scripture that they interpret to claim that the activity is religiously grounded. Say: "... the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong." (Ecclesiastes 9:11, King James version)

You should also know that the United States Justice Department stands ready to involve itself in RLUIPA cases.

What to do? You might start by writing your congressman and say that this law needs to be revised. Second, review your zoning code. In our state, most of them already favor churches disproportionately over other land uses. But some churches have greatly expanded the definition of a religious mission. The situation described at the beginning differs from an actual one only in scope and the fact that the real track was for motorcycles and not for automobiles.

With that, I will offer you this legal advice: don't get into a zoning dispute involving a church without first obtaining legal advice.

URBAN FORESTRY

Maintain your leafy assets

Develop a plan to properly care for your city or town's urban forest to ensure that your trees enhance the community for years to come.

By John Slater

A properly pruned crape myrtle enhances the landscape.

ealthy trees are community assets. They provide cooling shade for our homes and reduce energy consumption. Trees shade our parks where we play and along our trails where we exercise. They insure the water stays cool in our streams so wildlife can survive, and they provide habitat for birds that people enjoy watching. Trees increase revenues for your community by creating recreation opportunities, attracting wildlife, and because people like to shop and spend more money in areas that have trees.

In order to maintain this asset communities need to follow guidelines set forth in a tree management plan to insure that trees continue to contribute to the community. Here are some tips to incorporate into your plan.

Newly planted trees

Planning ahead

• Consider whether you are planting for shade, fall color, aesthetics, privacy/screening, wind breaks, etc.

Planting the right tree in the right place

- When planting under power lines, use short, flowering trees.
- For energy saving and shading your home or offices, use large hardwood trees and plant on the southeast, southwest and west sides.
- Planting distance from buildings depends on the mature size of the tree. Plant small trees six to 15 feet from a building, medium trees 15 feet from a building, and large trees 20 feet from a building.

• If planting trees in parks, consider grouping them since they are easier to maintain and protect than single trees.

Picking a good healthy tree at the nursery

- The tree you choose should look like a miniature tree, not a stick with a couple of limbs.
- At least 50 percent of the tree's height should be the crown.
- Check the root system. If it's a potted tree make sure that it is not root-bound or planted too deeply in the pot.

Proper planting

- Dig a hole that is wide but not too deep. Most urban soils are compacted, and a wide hole breaks up the soil so the roots can spread easier.
- Remove all bindings from the tree—burlap, wire basket and nylon rope. At the very least, cut off bindings and put them in the bottom of the hole.

Watering

- During the growing season, trees need the equivalent of one inch of rainfall a week. It is important not only to keep them alive but also to ensure they will be healthier and grow faster.
- Water must be allowed to soak deep into the ground. Water slowly and use drip irrigation or watering bags until the water has moistened down to the roots.

Newly planted trees

Tree stakes

• Use tree stakes only if they are needed and never for more than one year.

Mulching

• A thin layer of organic matter (bark, compost, wood chips) is needed each year for weed control. Mulch retains soil moisture and helps add valuable nutrients to the soil. (An old Master Gardener trick is to put down newspaper, then the mulch. This keeps the weeds away longer.) Mulch is for the roots, not for piling up on the bark.

Pruning

- Newly planted trees should not be pruned for three years unless they have a broken or diseased limb.
- Lawn mowers and weed eaters are death to young trees. You can't have both without proper training.

Mature tree care

Watering

• If trees go 10-12 days during the hot summer months

Improper pruning leads to "crape murder."

without a soaking rain, start watering. We take mature trees for granted and forget they need water. Many trees were lost during the drought in 2000 and for several years afterward. They declined so much from the drought that they could not recover.

Pruning—when and how

- Correct pruning is more important than timing. Pruning is needed to remove dead, diseased, injured, broken, rubbing and crowded limbs. Trees are thinned to allow for the wind and air to flow through. Most trees need very little pruning. Pruning is not about how big the pile of brush is at the end of day. It's the use of a skilled arborist, who knows his craft, doing only what needs to be done.
- Don't "top" your tree. A well-pruned tree will hardly look like it has been pruned. The tree should retain its natural shape and not the shape of a lollipop tree created by topping.

Protect roots from construction damage

• Protect trees from trenching, land clearing, soil compaction, etc.

Avoid "crape murder"

• This is the improper pruning of crape myrtles. Most crape myrtles are classified as a small tree, not a shrub. The myth is if you stress the plant, it will flower more, hence the crape murder. The Southern Living Garden Book, however, says the crape myrtle needs full sun and several weeks of afternoon temperatures of 90 degrees to bloom its best. Prune it as a small tree and you will also see a year-round benefit: its attractive bark.

Make a memory ... plant a tree.

Administrative review and needs assessment keys to recreational future

The Arkansas Recreation and Parks Association provides an important venue for professional development.

By Gregory S. Mohlke

n May of 2009, I saw a newspaper article from a project done by the University of Arkansas for Sebastian County. The project created a strategic plan for the county and, as a parks and recreation commissioner for the city of Batesville, it seemed to me that this would be something that Batesville could use. We were in the throes of trying to figure out how to best provide for our citizens. We had parks, pools, a golf course and people to run them, but the citizens wanted more. I contacted the University asking who had done the project and inquired if something could be done for us.

Dr. Merry Moiseichik, the director and instructor of the program, visited Batesville and explained the programs and the cost. For our $12,000 the project provided:

• Town meetings

- Questionnaires developed from the town meetings mailed to registered voters Risk and disability assessments of all parks
- Stakeholder interviews
- SWOT analysis using collected information to identify major issues of the department
- Research compiled using literature from the field and benchmarking practices of similar communities
- Combining all the information to make suggestions and priorities for the community to move to a preferred future

The program was tailored to what we needed and included recommendations to help provide direction for the future.

The phrase "You get what you pay for" simply does not apply when it comes to the value of the administrative review and needs assessment study conducted by the University of Arkansas Recreation and Sports Management Program School and Community Class of 2010. We got much more than expected.

In April, the citizens of Batesville received the results of the study, which will provide the blueprint for Batesville's recreational future.

In addition to the presentation, participating communities also receive copies of the entire report in binder form. The binder contains an executive summary of the almost 400 pages of information contained therein.

A number of steps are involved in the study and the compilation of the information. The research helped us identify where we are currently in regards to our demographics, facilities, funding, land, budget, staff and other areas. Then they took information from town meetings they held and developed a survey mailed to our registered voters to determine how to take the community to a new and more successful level. That was followed with research as to how to do it with some of the most prevalent steps listed as a starting point.

The study helped our community come together by allowing many citizens to participate in the town meetings, in the stakeholder interviews, and through the questionnaires. When a community gets to be actively involved in a project, they become owners of the project and become anxious for the outcome. While the students did most of the work, the community embraced the study and is very active in moving forward with the suggestions. The more that community members are involved, the more valuable the study becomes.

In Batesville, the entire community has developed a much stronger support for the Parks and Recreation Department. In addition, they are much more aware of the challenges that we face in the operation of the Parks and Recreation Department and have become much more active in seeking solutions.

The study provided all of the material needed to develop a long-range comprehensive plan. It also provided us with the foundation needed to build a successful program as well as a road map of how to get there.

The study provides a wealth of information, and while the number of pages seems daunting, the information is such that once I started to read it I was not able to put it down. It is so riveting because the community gets to look at its facilities through the eyes of another. How often do you get to see your facilities as someone else does?

Batesville is already using the study to develop a strategic plan and taking the necessary steps to become the best Parks and Recreation Department in the state of Arkansas. In fact, the city is currently considering a proposal that will reorganize their Parks and Recreation Department as well as provide funding for the building of a new community center, theater, indoor and outdoor aquatics parks, and a new unified baseball, softball, t-ball and soccer facility. None of this would have even been considered without the information contained in the study.

Dr. Moiseichik and her classes regularly provide consulting services to communities to help them provide high-quality recreation services. Recreation faculty and students work with at least one community each year to conduct studies involving risk management, feasibility, benchmarking, needs assessment and administrative reviews. I strongly encourage and recommend that any community interested in being considered for a study contact Dr. Moiseichik at the University of Arkansas College of Education and Health Professions, 308S HPER Building, Fayetteville, AR 72701; call 479-575-2870; or email merry@uark.edu.

Community gateways lead to development

Taking care of the main commercial entrances into your business districts can have a large impact on how your community is viewed by visitors and prospective employers alike.

By Mark S. Goodman, CEcD

Increasingly, we are realizing the importance of taking care of our communities as the "product" that we promote as a great place to live, work, invest and play. What we do to prepare our communities to be those great places falls under the category of community development. The community gateway—the road or highway that leads from the edge of the community into its business center or district, including downtown—is a crucial facet of community development. What is a gateway program, and why are gateways important to successful community economic development? Hopefully we can shed some light on this important community development program.

What are gateway programs?

A gateway program is designed to enhance the corridors connecting the edge of a community to its downtown and/or other commercial districts, giving the people a positive image of the community while driving by and encouraging appropriate types of development along the corridors. Gateway programs may include physical improvements to the streetscapes, as well as land planning and associated codes to affect positive and appropriate business development activity. These measures are intended to impact both short- and long-term planning and community programming. Gateway programming is important for a number of reasons, including:

It builds a positive image of the community, showcasing its attractiveness to both residents and visitors and directly addressing a community's pride in itself and its "product;"

It can enhance traffic flow and transit; and

It can enhance a community's "look," playing to whatever design theme the community is pursuing as it tries to distinguish itself from other cities.

Components of a community gateway program

Gateway programming basically addresses two main components: improving the physical look of the corridors, and land use planning and associated codes. The first step in developing a gateway program is to assess the current gateways, focusing on their physical characteristics. The key is to critically look at the signage and billboards, measuring cleanliness and legibility. Are our signs tastefully placed, or do our signs look more like clutter? Also, critically look at sidewalks, bike paths and lighting along the corridor and in front of the businesses and residences, measuring the degree to which the corridors are pedestrian-friendly, safe and clean. Additionally, look at the landscaping and whether plantings and greenery enhance the views and sense of place.

If there is a determined need to improve the physical appearance of our corridors, the next step is to establish the planned improvements and determine cost before implementing the physical improvements. A few examples of physical improvement strategies include:

Planting more trees and floral groundcover in the medians and along the sides of the corridors;

Placing decorative trash receptacles, flower pots and benches in strategic locations; and Positioning decorative, uniform street and traffic signs at intersections, and installing decorative lighting along the route.

As with any programming, we are limited by our budgets. However, labor can be volunteered and grants can be pursued. Ask yourself, how important is it to the community?

Once we have decided on physical improvements, the other step in the process is to provide land use planning and other codes and controls to help protect and support development and appearances of businesses along the corridors. These plans and controls can also help to ensure that the improvements you have made are not compromised. Land use plans and the associated codes and controls, including zoning and creation of any overlay districts, can help prevent incompatible property uses and actions that physically affect other businesses' success and property values. Keep in mind that plans, as well as specific codes and covenants will only provide the community benefits if there is enforcement.

Benefits

By participating in a community development program such as this, you can benefit from increased property values and marketability of the corridor's properties. You can also benefit from community engagement, volunteerism and pride created through the project and by the image-building results of your work in the eyes of a visitor. (Remember that you only have one chance at a good first impression.) Finally, you stand to gain from the public-private relationships that can be developed as a result.

Where do I get help?

Community development programs such as this can play a critical role in the marketing of your community to others as part of an effort to create jobs. Comprehensive community development programming requires some careful planning, organizing, data-gathering and consensus-building. Many communities and economic developers rely on third party consultants, universities and/or state agencies to develop program templates for moving forward. Your choice of external assistance will depend on how much you are willing to spend, how quickly you need the results, and how comprehensive your programming will be.

The Center for Economic Development Education at UALR's Institute for Economic Advancement (IEA) can provide advice and referral, as well as conduct a range of community development training programs focused on this and other topics in community economic development. IEA has the data, the staff and the expertise to provide valuable support. For further information, call us at 501-569-8519.

Hot weather jobs have deadly risks

As the temperature and humidity levels rise in Arkansas, so do the risks for people who spend their days outside.

By Charles W. Smith, M.D.

he heat combined with our state's typically high humidity is especially dangerous. Arkansans know that summertime highs are often above 95 degrees, and it's not uncommon to see temperatures cross the century mark.

For veteran outdoor workers, summertime heat is more of a nuisance than a hazard. Their bodies have been acclimatized through the increasingly warm spring and early summer, and they are prepared for the hottest weather of the season. If they are healthy, they can endure it by pacing themselves and drinking extra fluids. But many people are not so well adjusted to the heat, and some will take on jobs and activities that will put them at risk of heat exhaustion or even heat stroke.

Risk factors

For employers, workers and anyone involved in outdoor physical activity, it's important to understand the factors at play when assessing heat risks. The temperature, humidity, radiant heat from the sun and air velocity play a role, but most important are a person's age, weight, fitness, medical condition and acclimatization to the heat.

The body cools itself by circulating blood to the skin, which allows the release of excess heat from the skin. Physical exertion makes it difficult to cool down because more blood is directed to the muscles being used. Sweating also helps cool the body, but the higher the humidity, the less effective sweating is at providing evaporative cooling. Sweating also depletes the body's fluids and electrolytes, such as potassium, calcium and magnesium salts, which can lead to severe muscle cramps.

Watch for symptoms

Recognizing the symptoms of heat exhaustion is important to avoiding heat stroke, the most deadly heat-related condition.

During the hottest weather, communities see heat-related deaths rise among their frailest citizens. The elderly, the very young, the chronically ill, and people who attempt strenuous outdoor physical activity without being acclimatized are most at risk.

A person with heat exhaustion experiences fatigue, nausea or headache. Heat exhaustion can be remedied in most people with fluid replacement and by resting in the shade or air conditioning. The fluids should contain electrolytes. If mental functioning is not altered, people typically recover from heat exhaustion within 24-48 hours. For infants and the elderly, heat exhaustion can quickly lead to serious problems, such as kidney failure.

Heat stroke

Heat stroke is much more serious, with mortality as high as 80 percent if not treated immediately. Heat stroke occurs when the body can no longer cool itself and the body temperature reaches 105 degrees. Other signs of heat stroke include confusion, delirium, fainting and convulsions. The skin becomes hot and dry. Victims of heat stroke will die unless treated promptly. They may go into a coma, and if their temperature remains high, brain damage can occur. First aid should include taking the patient to a cool area and soaking the clothing with cool water and elevating the person's legs. They should be fanned to increase cooling. Aggressive first aid treatment followed quickly by medical care can reduce the mortality rate to about 10 percent.

To avoid heat-related disorders, the best rule of thumb is to drink plenty of water, as much as a quart per hour. Electrolyte solutions or foods during breaks that will restore electrolytes are necessary when strenuous activity continues for longer than about two hours. Just as important is recognizing the signs of heat stress, especially among those most at risk.

County equalization boards to meet in August ounty equalization boards will meet Aug. 1 through Oct. 1 to equalize (adjust an assessment to create a rate uniform with another) the assessed value for all acreage lands, city and town lots, other real property and personal property. The boards will meet as often as necessary during this time to complete their work (ACA § 26-27-309). If a county's ratio of assessed-to-market value is out of compliance, the equalization board may meet after Oct. 1, but no later than the third Monday in November (ACA § 26-27-311).

County equalization boards have two responsibilities: (1) to review and equalize overall county assessments as assessed by the assessor, and (2) to hear assessment appeals by property owners. The board begins the review of assessments on Aug. 1, when the county assessor delivers the completed assessment records to the county clerk, who serves as the secretary for the board. Assessment appeals from land owners begin no later than the second Monday in August (ACA § 26-27-317).

Cities and towns have a part to play in deciding who sits as a member of the county equalization board. Cities and towns select one member of a five-member board (counties with a population less than 75,000) and two members of a nine-member board (counties with a population greater than 75,000) (ACA § 26-27-303 and 304).

To select county equalization board members, city and town representatives within the county shall hold a meeting during the month of May of each year in which the terms of any of the members of the county equalization board shall expire (ACA § 26-27-304(b)(2)(A)). The mayor of the city or town or his or her designee shall serve as the representative of his or her city or town (Id.). The mayor of the county seat shall be the chair of the meeting, and if there are dual county seats, the mayor of the larger of the two seats shall be the chair of the meeting (Id.). Those at the meeting shall select the member of the board via majority vote, and each city or town shall be entitled to one vote (Id.). No action shall be taken unless a quorum is present. A majority of all of the representatives of all cities and incorporated towns in the county shall constitute a quorum (Id.).

Take advantage of private giving

In addition to state and federal funding opportunities, municipalities must take advantage of corporate, nonprofit and other private funding sources for building a better community.

By Chad Gallagher

The demands on municipal governments often seem to be without limits. Mayors, city council members and municipal employees find themselves handling budgets and major fiscal responsibilities, public utilities and services, legislation making, citizen complaints, public relations, economic development, animal control, emergency services, park developing, community planning, lobbying and a little politics on the side. With such a wide range of responsibility, elected officials are always looking for additional tools and resources to help achieve their tasks and goals. The importance of grant writing cannot be underestimated, nor can learning the strategies and techniques for finding and writing grants. Most grant applications made by municipalities are made to state and federal government agencies. It's important not to stop there. There is a wealth of grant money that can be found in the private sector to fund community projects and achieve things that would otherwise be out of reach. Every successful grant application will only make your local tax dollars go further than previously possible.

Corporations, private foundations, nonprofit organizations and philanthropic organizations should all be a part of a municipality's strategy for attaining supplemental funding for community projects. Municipalities often do not pursue these dollars and fail to benefit from the cooperation and collaboration that is extended to the community by many of these private entities.

Corporations exist because of the patronage of their customers. Corporations understand that public relations and good standing in the community are important factors to long-term business success. Many corporations have created special programs through which they give charitably to a wide variety of programs. Municipal officials should visit with the corporations in their communities to discuss overall community needs, the corporation's charitable interests, and ways the company can make an investment in the community's future. A company with a presence in your community, employing local citizens and enjoying the support of local patrons, is almost always willing to find ways to help empower a strategic community plan.

Many larger corporations have established charitable foundations to manage their giving. Most of these foundations focus on giving in specific regions or communities where they have a presence, a specific field of giving, or projects geared toward a specific population. It is important for municipal officials to become familiar with these foundations. Even small local businesses should be given an opportunity to participate in great community projects. Many local businesses will participate when asked and many of them are a part of larger corporate franchises or national organizations that have giving programs worthy of exploring.

Municipalities should also seek funding from nonprofit organizations and charitable foundations established to further specific projects related to the greater public good. In Arkansas alone, great foundations have endowed scholarships, built buildings, funded healthcare programs, initiated economic development projects, housing efforts and much more. Arkansas's private foundations have a long history of investing significantly in the future of our state. Municipalities should find ways to partner with these great organizations in order to build better communities. Forging strong partnerships for creative solutions to our challenges achieves the goals of the municipal officials and the charitable organizations. For an online database of Arkansas foundations and some out-of-state foundations you can visit www.arkansasag.gov/charity/search.php. The Web site www.foundationcenter.org is another good resource.

Africa speaks, Arkansas responds

By Sherman Banks

African royals participate in the Chief's Procession at the conference's opening ceremony.

Representatives from the League in May participated in a Chieftaincy conference in Ghana. This was the second international conference of the Africa Global Sister Cities Foundation (AGSCF) that brought together traditional rulers—or royals—and elected officials from across the continent of Africa to bring about a more efficient and stronger African union. The focal point of the conference was to develop guidelines for traditional leaders, local government officials and youth leadership on good governance and sustainable economic development in meeting the United Nations' Millennium Development Goals by 2015 in Africa.

Arkansas and the League were well represented by participants who served on panels, moderated plenary sessions, and gave presentations to the full conference. League Assistant Director Ken Wasson and League Counsel John Wilkerson in the Chieftaincy conference provided their perspective of how city management and local government can play an active role in working with sister cities for better and stronger economic development planning.

The conference through lectures and panel discussions on Chieftaincy and local government laws in Africa lead to the adoption of a position paper that will direct country advocacy, through the AGSCF. It will offer the opportunity to get appropriate government agencies to effectively support the development of local programs through sister cities.

In additional to the Chieftaincy conference our delegation, which also included Star City Mayor Gene Yarbrough, made plans to host an agriculture and youth health care conference that will take place Aug. 3-7 in Little Rock at the Doubletree Hotel. To further the five-year plan of the AGSC they chose Arkansas to host its third international conference. The conference will also encompass those states that are contiguous to Arkansas—Mississippi, Tennessee, Louisiana, Alabama and Georgia. The theme of the conference is "To bridge the gap of hunger through the development of sustainable agriculture and economic adaptation with additional emphasis on youth health care highlighting food and nutrition."

Sister Cities has been the spring board to promote a better world through citizen diplomacy in Africa. Mayor Yarbrough and Pat Webb Chair of the Lincoln County Development Industrial Commission Board of Trustees at the University of Arkansas at Monticello were extended an invitation by Chief Nana Kwame to travel to and tour his district for the possibility of an agricultural sister city/sister county relationship. They explored the agriculture crops, met with locals and talked with the youth to determine compatibility.

Last week Mayor Yarbrough received a resolution from Chief Kwame and the District Council of AFIGYA-KWABRE of their desire to establish a sister city relationship with Star City and Lincoln County. Although economic development is the primary objective for the sister city relationship, education and culture also rank high on list of interests. Mayor Yarbrough said he was excited about the possibility and that he was going to send a letter of acceptance to Chief Kwame. A formal signing to confirm the relationship will take place during August conference in Little Rock.

The involvement of Arkansas and the Municipal League with Sister Cities has yielded the possibility of a sustainable international agriculture economic development program not only for Arkansas, but for the entire Delta region as well. For more information on how to register for the conference or how to develop a sister city relationship, contact Sherman Banks, international economic and tourism consultant, at 501-376-8193, e-mail sbanks@aristotle.net, or write to P.O. Box 165920 Little Rock, AR 72216.

Construction begins at Clinton Park Bridge

LITTLE ROCK—President Bill Clinton, U.S. Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Economic Development John Fernandez, Gov. Mike Beebe and other national and local leaders broke ground on the Clinton Presidential Park Bridge on the morning of May 28 in Little Rock. The bridge, built in 1899 and formerly known as the Rock Island Railroad Bridge, will be renovated into a pedestrian pathway linking Little Rock and North Little Rock. The bridge will close the loop on the 15-mile Arkansas River Trail, which runs along both the north and south banks of the Arkansas River. The $10.5 million renovation is scheduled to begin in July and take 12-18 months.

Helping to build Arkansas' backbone BEGINS WITH HAVING ONE.

At Stephens, we've never shied away from tough decisions and hard work. And for more than 75 years, we've applied an independent perspective, diligence and common sense to helping build Arkansas' prosperity.

Again in 2009, our firm led the state in successfully managing the largest percentage of tax-exempt issues. During this same period, Stephens completed a majority of the financial advisory transactions for Arkansas school districts.* And while 2009 was a good year, we understand it was possible because of the trust and confidence shown by our fellow Arkansans.

At Stephens, we are continually impressed with the talent and dedication of the men and women who manage Arkansas' municipalities, hospitals, colleges and universities, school districts, state agencies, counties, utility systems and other governmental organizations.

For over 75 years, Stephens Inc. has been the market leader in this state. Thank you, Arkansas, for your continued confidence in our capabilities.
