Dear Friends:

This last year has passed so quickly. It seems like I just took office a short time ago, yet so much has happened in that time. It has been an honor and privilege to work with and for the many dedicated public servants and to serve you as the Arkansas Municipal League president.

I want to thank Fort Smith Vice Mayor Gary Campbell, first vice president of the League, and district vice presidents, Lakeview Alderman Joe Gies, Bryant Mayor Larry Mitchell, Alpena Mayor Bobbie Bailey and Warren Alderman Dorothy Henderson for their dedicated service to the League. It was a pleasure serving with all of you this past year.

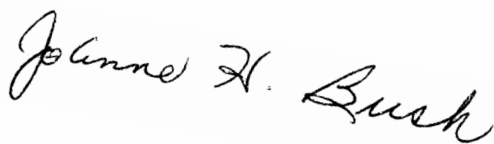

I also want to thank each of you who accepted appointments and agreed to serve on the various committees and councils this past year. When I first took office I reminded everyone that it takes an entire team effort to accomplish our goals, and no one team player is more important than the next. I asked each of you who made the commitments to the team to give 100 percent and we would emerge winners. You all went above and beyond with 150 percent making this team a winner and you are to be commended.

Over the past year it has been an honor and privilege to work with League Executive Director Don Zimmerman and the League's professional and committed staff. They are truly the backbone of our team, and we are blessed to call them our own. I would like to thank Don and the staff for all of your hard work and support over the past year.

One of the greatest benefits of being involved in the League is the networking opportunities and the great friendships that are made for a lifetime with other city officials. I encourage all of you to continue to be active members of the Arkansas Municipal League and to take advantage of all of its great programs.

In closing, let me ask you to never forget that we are placed in our elective positions to serve those who have entrusted us with running the cities and towns that make up our great state. If we can end each day by helping or enriching the life of just one of those individuals whom we have publicly declared to serve, then we have accomplished that which we set out to do.

Warmest regards,

JoAnne H. Bush

Wellness, driving safety programs on a roll

By Andrew Morgan, League staff

Since its installation in February, the League's new driving simulator has already covered many a virtual mile as city and town police officers from across the state hone their defensive driving skills.

Open to member municipalities that participate in the Municipal Vehicle Program, the League's Defensive Driving Program, of which the simulator is the centerpiece, aims to help our city officers become proactive in safe, defensive driving. The Program is designed to help reduce the chance of injury or death from vehicle accidents and thus reduce the amount of claims and lower member municipalities' insurance premium costs.

David Baxter is the Defensive Driving Program's facilitator, and he brings his experience in several areas to the Program. He is a certified Arkansas law enforcement instructor, and all training provided to law enforcement officers is certified through the Arkansas Commission on Law Enforcement Standards and Training.

David has already trained eight municipal police departments—nearly 100 officers—and has the Pine Bluff and Hot Springs police departments on his schedule.

David also brings his fitness expertise to the League's new Healthy Workplace Planning Program. He is a certified personal trainer and wellness coach with 10 years of experience in wellness coaching, personal schoolroom for cities and towns looking to develop wellness programs.

training, fitness and nutritional guidance. Through the Program the League aims to promote fitness, health and well-being among city and town employees covered under the League's Municipal Health Benefit Fund.

The facility's main use, David explains, is as a model facility for qualifying member municipalities. He will be using the fitness room and its state-of-the-art training equipment to coach cities on developing their own wellness programs.

Cities and towns don't have to spend a hunk of cash to get results either, he says.

"You don't have to go out and spend $100,000 on a wellness center," David says. "You can use what you have. If you have a walking track already, well that's a lot right there."

As part of his train-the-trainer approach, David also strives to find the best information possible on wellness subjects—from fitness training, to healthy eating, to tobacco cessation—and share it with the member cities.

"The first step in a wellness program is providing the information," David says.

The Cooper Aerobic Institute, www.cooperinst.org, is one excellent source of information on a variety of wellness fronts, he says. It's also where David received his certification. The Cooper Institute has been a model for the League's wellness program.

Our state also has a comprehensive yet often overlooked online resource, Healthy Arkansas at www.arkansas.gov/ha/home.html. It's a hub for all things wellness.

David can help members sift through the seemingly endless amounts of wellness information and advice out there and develop a program for individuals and cities based on their unique needs and goals.

To develop a wellness plan for your municipality, or to get your police officers behind the wheel of the simulator and on their way to safer driving habits, call David Baxter at 501-374-3484 Ext. 110, e-mail DBaxter@arml.org. David will also be on hand at the League's 75th Convention, June 17-19 at the Hot Springs Convention Center. Drop by the League Services Desk in the exhibit hall and say hello.

President's Budget Calls for Increases in Programs Important to Cities

By Carolyn Coleman

In addition to the critical investments in education, renewable sources of energy and health care reform, President Barack Obama's full fiscal year 2010 budget makes significant investments in other key priorities for cities and towns, including affordable housing, public safety and transportation.

The $3.6 trillion spending plan also funds a number of transformative initiatives designed to build a new foundation for long-term growth and prosperity.

"City leaders are committed to achieving the goal of economic prosperity for all of our cities and towns and applaud the President for recognizing the importance of federal support in achieving that goal in his proposal," said National League of Cities President Kathleen M. Novak, mayor, Northglenn, Colo.

In addition to the critical investments, President Obama's budget also includes $17 billion in cuts from existing programs that, according to the Administration, "do not accomplish their intended objectives, are not efficient or that replicate efforts being completed by another initiative."

The NLC is carefully reviewing the list of programs targeted for cuts to ensure these changes will not have unintended consequences for cities and towns.

With the recent adoption of the congressional budget resolution and release of the President's budget, the House and Senate will now begin consideration of the President's spending request.

The following summarizes key aspects of President Obama's Fiscal Year 2010 Budget:

- Fully fund the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program

The President's plan provides $4.5 billion for communities to continue to invest in and expand economic opportunities for low-income families.

- Create a new Choice Neighborhoods Initiative

The budget includes $250 million for HUD to support a range of transformative interventions in neighborhoods of concentrated poverty. The goal of Choice Neighborhoods is to transform neighborhoods of extreme poverty into functioning, sustainable mixed-income neighborhoods with well-functioning services, schools, public assets, transportation and access to jobs.

- Provide initial funding for 50,000 more cops on the beat

The budget includes $298 million, on top of Recovery Act funding, to advance toward the goal of hiring 50,000 additional police officers to help states and communities prevent the growth of crime during the economic downturn.

- Fight urban violence

The budget includes an increase of $25 million within the Department of Justice to fund Community-based Violence Prevention Initiatives, building on the experience of the last several years with successful initiatives such as Chicago's Operation Ceasefire and the Boston Gun Project.

- Support for sustainable communities

The budget provides $150 million for HUD's Sustainable Communities Initiative. The goal of the Initiative is the integration of transportation and housing investments that result in more regional and local sustainable development patterns, reduced greenhouse gas emissions and more transit-accessible housing choices for residents.

- Create a new Energy Innovation Fund

The budget includes funds to drive the creation of an energy-efficient housing market—including the retrofitting of older, inefficient housing—and catalyze private lending for this purpose in the residential sector.

- Provide funding for an affordable housing trust fund for the first time and increase funding for rental assistance

While given the green light by Congress in 2008, the Housing Trust Fund has fallen short because it hasn't been provided resources to help families. This budget restores funding for the trust fund, requesting $1 billion to finance the development, rehabilitation and preservation of affordable housing for very low income residents. The budget preserves approximately 1.3 million affordable rental units through increased funding for contracts with owners of multifamily properties. In addition, a robust Housing Choice Voucher program will help more than one million extremely low- to low-income families with rental assistance to live in decent housing in neighborhoods of their choice.

- Sustain a new federal commitment to high-speed rail

To provide Americans a 21st Century transportation system, the Administration proposes a $1 billion per year high-speed rail state grant program, in addition to the $8 billion provided in the Recovery Act. This proposal marks a new federal commitment to give the traveling public a practical and environmentally sustainable alternative to flying or driving.

- Support innovative and effective strategies to improve student achievement

Through the Innovation Fund, the budget invests in school systems and nonprofit organizations with demonstrated track records of success in raising student achievement to expand their work or implement new innovative approaches through the Innovation Fund. The President's plan supports "Promise Neighborhoods," a new effort to test innovative strategies to improve academic achievement and life outcomes in high-poverty areas modeled after the Harlem Children's Zone.

Center seeks peace through international trade

The recently opened Arkansas World Trade Center in Rogers gives the state a direct link to international trade and promotes peace through local and global economic development.

By Sherman Banks, guest writer

Rogers and Benton County in northwest Arkansas has seen nearly $2 billion worth of development in the last 10 years. At the apex of the growth, which includes first class shopping centers and a world class hotel, is the new Arkansas World Trade Center (AWTC).

The AWTC (www.arwtc.org) is a member of the World Trade Center Association (world.wtca.org), a nonprofit organization established in 1970 to promote peace through international economic growth.

of the corporate partners located in the area. Wal-Mart, Tyson Foods, and J.B. Hunt all foster a favorable climate for international economic growth, and the AWTC is located in the heart of this trade district. Surrounding the AWTC is a shopping center, and a number of businesses are located in the Center itself. Just one block away is a hotel and suites adjacent to the John Q. Hammons Convention Center.

According to AWTC President Dan Hendrix, the Center, which opened in 2007, was U.S. Rep. John Boozman's vision. Inspired by the economic development work of two Montana Congressmen in their home state, Boozman developed a keen interest in procuring a World Trade Center for his district. He saw that many shipping containers came into the area from other countries, but the containers were being returned empty.

Boozman held several public meetings in 2006 with local business leaders, the Arkansas Economic Development Commission (AEDC) and the head of the Montana World Trade Center. He encouraged them to think big, establish a direct connection with the University of Arkansas's Walton College of Business and create a trade center to service the whole state. The AEDC provided a grant of $200,000 for the AWTC to join the World Trade Center Association. That license is held by the University of Arkansas.

Since opening, the AWTC has hosted high profile individuals from the U.S. Department of Commerce, a number of ambassadors, consul generals and trade ministers from 18 countries. While all World Trade Centers are not created equal, they all share the goal of promoting world peace through international trade and development. Whether the Center is taking a trade mission to foreign countries,

The AWTC joins nearly 300 centers in about 100 countries, all linked to over 750,000 companies worldwide.

Ronnie McDowell brings honky-tonk hits to 75th Convention

Country singer Ronnie McDowell will bring his blend of romantic intimacy and honky-tonk excitement to the League's 75th Convention. He will perform at 9 p.m. Thursday, June 18, in the Hot Springs Convention Center's Horner Hall Ballroom. The concert is free to Convention delegates.

McDowell came out of nowhere in 1977 with the heartfelt tribute to recently deceased Elvis, "The King is Gone." Guest appearances on Grand Ole Opry and Dick Clark's American Bandstand followed, and the song to date has sold more than five million copies.

A string of hits followed between 1979 and

McDowell

1986, including the hits "Older Women," "You're Gonna Ruin My Bad Reputation" and "It's Only Make Believe." All but one of his singles became top 10 hits. McDowell has toured with Conway Twitty, Tammy Wynette and Loretta Lynn. He sang 36 songs on the soundtrack of Elvis, the Dick Clark-produced television movie starring Kurt Russell. He also was the singing voice for the television movies Elvis and the Beauty Queen and Elvis and Me.

NLC helps cities make most of Recovery Act

By Michael Karpman and Katie Meade

As part of its efforts to connect local officials with information about the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009, the National League of Cities is creating a series of briefs focused on the funds available and how to access them.

The NLC's Institute for Youth, Education, and Families (YEF Institute) has developed the first set of in-depth briefs describing opportunities to use economic recovery package funding to advance local priorities. The NLC plans to produce additional briefs on other topics related to the Recovery Act, including workforce development, public transportation, energy efficiency and broadband access. These briefs are designed to help city leaders identify opportunities for action and determine how to maximize the impact of stimulus dollars at the local level.

The YEF Institute has also prepared an overview of funding opportunities available through the Act that could go to municipal governments to support programs and services for children, youth, and families.

Briefs currently available focus on youth violence prevention, after school and summer programs for youth, early childhood success, foreclosure prevention and neighborhood stabilization, youth employment, access to tax credits and public benefits and more.

To download the funding overview or any of the briefs in this series, visit www.nlc.org/recovery.

DeWitt airport awarded FAA grant

DeWitt has received $104,500 for its airport through a grant from the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), the Daily Leader has reported. The funds will be used to install and replace the rotating beacon and to install a wind cone and a segmented circle.

The state as a whole received about $4.8 million for various projects to local airports ranging from construction to rehabilitating runways.

"Investing in our local airports is an effective way to build a strong economy in Arkansas," U.S. Rep. Marion Berry said. "The more we invest in our transportation infrastructure, the more new businesses we are able to attract."

The funds will enhance the safety and security of air travel throughout the state while boosting local economies, U.S. Sen. Blanche Lincoln said.

"I remain committed to ensuring Arkansas receives the resources and support it needs to stay strong," she said.

U.S. Sen. Mark Pryor believes this federal funding will enable local airports to make the costly repairs and improvements to stay in good, working condition.

"That's just critical for safety and economic development," he said.

Longtime Little Rock employee awarded for service

Gay Spencer, who has worked in the Little Rock Police Department Chief's Office for 24 years, was named the 2009 recipient of the Mahlon A. Martin Employee of the Year, the city announced May 6 in a media release.

At an awards luncheon, Spencer was cited for her dedication, efficiency and knowledge.

"Throughout the department, and indeed throughout the city organization, if someone needs to know information, they just say 'Call Gay,'" Police Chief Stewart Thomas said. "She is the glue that holds this department together."

working to locate an industry in Arkansas, helping to source products internationally or assisting our corporate partners in the state, it furthers its mission of commercial diplomacy and world peace.

The AWTC is also beginning to utilize Sister Cities International as a means to do international business. There have been thus far two missions to explore the possibility of economic development, one to Mexico and another to Nigeria.

Once people had to be brought to Rogers kicking and screaming, Mayor Steve Womack says. Now they leave kicking and screaming. He credits a local environment that includes an excellent education system, great recreation, fine arts, delicious food, a regional airport and highway connections, abundant natural resources and the new AWTC. Most importantly, notes Womack, they have the amenities of a larger city without the problems of large urban areas, a fact that gives northwest Arkansas and the whole state appeal internationally.

Try management by walking

Taking time to walk our cities' streets offers us a true ground-level perspective on planning and development needs.

By Jim von Tungeln

One of the most difficult aspects of public administration is creating consensus about what should be done and when. Nothing disappoints an elected official faster than discovering that the public cares little about a cherished initiative. Planning initiatives are particularly prone to such indifference.

Accordingly, planning and development programs sometimes fail. Small wonder. The ones who generate them

Sometimes, after completing a land use and physical conditions survey of a city, I know more about some parts of it than folks who live there. Part of it could be lack of concern on the part of long-time residents. I rather imagine, though, most of it results from simply driving around and taking things for granted.

Anyway, let's go walking.

Notice the graffiti, broken windows and trashy gutters. It communicates to the pedestrian that this portion of our city has been written off and turned over to the worst of those among us. It isn't worth maintaining so there won't be any more private investment here. So let's walk on.

Oops, there's a utility pole or traffic sign cemented into the middle of a sidewalk (assuming there is one). Good thing we're not in a wheel chair or with a friend who is.

Let's avoid that overpass ahead. It is used as a privy by a large flock of pigeons and the resulting underlayment is quite toxic I am told. Too bad. That's the route most tourists take when visiting our city.

Crossing the street will be fun. Most municipal street crossings fall into one of three categories. The first contains no crossing facilities or markings for pedestrians at all. Fend for yourself. The second contains crossing markers but nothing else. Wouldn't it be nice to narrow the pavement width at pedestrian crossings? The third type contains a signal that gives pedestrians four seconds to cross five lanes of traffic. Oh well. We could go on and on about how cities (and buildings) are increasingly designed around the automobile. Let's continue on our journey.

Beyond these simple inconveniences to pedestrian traffic, an eye-level, walking-pace look at our city offers many additional insights. At pedestrian level, we notice just how grotesquely ugly and/or sterile some modern buildings are. We also notice how one unkempt property can spread its are seldom the ones who will be impacted. And there is a growing tendency to ignore issues that don't impact us.

On the other hand, planners and elected officials can spend loads of time dealing with special interest groups. Sometimes their issues are quite limited in scope and impact few outside the group.

How do we learn about our city from the ground up, so that we can match our ideas with the perceived needs of the citizens? I have a simple approach. Let's walk around our cities. While we are at it, let's take the music players out of our ears, the sunglasses off our noses, and the cares of the day off our minds. What we hear, see, smell and encounter may amaze us. It's what the "ground floor" citizen deals with every day.

At left, these pylons near the Clinton Library might give an early morning walker reason to pause. Below, the artistic arch on the lawn of downtown Little Rock's Kramer School might be overlooked by drivers, but it enthralls Wayne Pfirman, a visitor from Cincinnati, Ohio.

blight to several others. We also notice how many homeowners park vehicles athwart sidewalks. We, sometimes to our terror, notice who hangs around outside convenience stores and what is being sold in them. We also notice how nasty some dumpster locations along the street can be.

Let's look at the positive side. If we walk around during the day, we may encounter visitors to our community. They will usually point out nice things about it that we started taking for granted long ago. If they ask for directions, we may realize just how difficult it is to get from one place to another in our town. We might even remember that next time a group of rowdy citizens doesn't want a through-street anywhere near their neighborhood.

In older areas of the city, we will notice how they used to mix uses up in the old days. Further, we might observe that mixed uses and varied densities didn't bring about the end of life as we knew it back then.

Finally, we can see first hand just how much impact a modest bit of landscaping or design control can have on the visual impression of our city.

You just notice little things like that when you walk around. Now, please understand, I'm talking about walking around independently. A guided tour of a new development doesn't count. I'm talking about a good-old European-type walkabout.

Also, I'm not talking about stopping at the local coffee shop. That's one of the worst places to learn anything intelligent about urban issues. That is just my opinion, of course.

I'm talking about trying to see your community as people at the most basic level see it. Where are the roses and where are the warts? Of what are we proudest? What parts of our community would we just as soon visitors not see? What needs fixing the most?

The Brookings Institution counsels us to address community development by first fixing the basics. We can find out what those basic needs are by simply getting out and strolling.

If we take the earphones out, we might just hear the birds singing while we are at it.

State's urban canopy growing

Following recommendations set forth by the Governor's Commission on Global Warming, tree planting in the state's urban areas is increasing by the hundreds of thousands.

By Christina Fowler

More than 38,000 pine seedlings and 173,000 hardwood seedlings have been planted in Arkansas this spring as the result of a partnership between the Arkansas Forestry Commission (AFC) and the Arkansas Association of Conservation Districts (AACD). The planting was an effort to achieve one of 54 recommendations set forth by the Governor's Commission on Global Warming and exceeded their recommendation of planting 100,000 trees in Arkansas communities in 2009.

Local conservation districts helped to generate interest for the trees by placing advertising and distributing flyers in their local communities. AFC delivered nearly 135,000 tree seedlings to coolers throughout the state for 42 participating conservation districts to use for community tree planting projects or to provide to clubs and organizations such as Master Gardeners and Boy Scout troops. AFC personnel also distributed an additional 76,000 trees during school and public Arbor Day and Earth Day events.

With the signing of Act 696 of the 86th Arkansas General Assembly, Gov. Mike Beebe established the Governor's Commission on Global Warming. The Commission is charged with setting a "global warming pollution reduction goal" for Arkansas and a "comprehensive strategic plan for implementation of the global warming pollution reduction goal."

The Commission's final report states, "Arkansas's forests and forest management have a significant role to play in the state's strategies to reduce or offset GHGs (Greenhouse Gases) and adapt to future climate effects."

The report establishes a goal of implementing tree-planting and retention programs in urban areas by recommending the planting of 100,000 additional trees each year between 2009 and 2025. This would result in an estimated increase of 1.7 million trees in urban areas statewide, or a four percent increase in the number of urban trees.

"I am so pleased Governor Beebe's Commission on Global Warming has completed a key objective: planting 100,000 trees in Arkansas communities," State Forester John T. Shannon said. "The Arkansas Association of Conservation Districts did a great job of coordinating planting."

The planting project was designed to help raise awareness of the Commission's recommendation and encourage communities to establish their own tree planting projects.

According to the report, approximately 43,412,000 urban trees currently grow in Arkansas, resulting in an average of 25 percent canopy cover in urban areas statewide. Meeting the 100,000 trees per year target would boost the canopy cover in urban areas to approximately 26 percent.

Fossil fuel use can be reduced as a result of planting trees that provide shade and wind protection to buildings. However, these benefits may not be achieved within the first year, because trees are quite small when they are planted. Some time is required before experiencing the full benefits.

The AFC grows and sells tree seedlings for reforestation projects. Seedlings are grown at Baucum Nursery for one growing season, except for 25 pack Loblolly pine, which are two years old. When the seedlings become dormant in the fall, they are lifted and packed "bare-root" (there is no dirt on the roots) for shipment to designated cooler locations. These trees are normally no more than two to three feet tall but work well for community tree giveaways or large tree planting projects due to the low cost per tree. Bundles of 100 hardwoods are only $30, bringing the cost per tree to only $.30. A pack of 25 trees (of one species) is $20. Pine seedlings can be purchased in bundles of 500 for only $30, a cost of $.06 per tree.

Some of the species grown at Baucum include: improved loblolly pine, improved shortleaf pine, cherrybark oak, cow oak, northern red oak, nuttall oak, overcup oak, pin oak, sawtooth oak, shumard oak, water oak, white oak, willow oak, bald cypress, green ash, red mulberry, native pecan and water tupelo. # Protect yourself from sun's damaging rays

In a lineup of five Americans, the current odds say that one member of the group will develop skin cancer in their lifetime.

By Daniel Davis, M.D.

With more than one million skin cancers diagnosed each year, it's more than the combined incidence of cancers of the breast, prostate, lung and colon.

And though the overwhelming common perception is that a tanned body is far more desirable than a fair-skinned one, especially this time of year, there are plenty of things to consider before rushing out to put yourself in harm's way.

Don't get burned

Just as bronzed physiques increasingly become the social norm, statistics show that skin cancer is, too. According to The Skin Cancer Foundation, more than one million skin cancers were diagnosed in 2008. One in five Americans and one in three Caucasians will develop skin cancer during the course of their lifetimes, and a person's risk for being diagnosed doubles if they have had five or more sunburns at any time in their life.

And, perhaps most importantly, more than 90 percent of skin cancer is caused by sun exposure.

For whatever reason, people are going out in the sun more and covering up less. Despite what the grim statistics show about skin cancer, people are continually putting themselves at great risk by not protecting themselves from the sun.

Skin cancer is not just prevalent among the tanning-bed crowd, the elderly or those who spend countless hours and consecutive days lying in the direct path of the sun's harmful rays, as one typically might think.

That includes you

I see firsthand different types of skin cancers every day among all types of people.

For example, one patient was a young farmer who was a healthy, hard worker who figured he'd be the last person to wind up being diagnosed with cancer. This case shows that you can be as healthy as can be in every aspect of your life, but if you don't protect yourself from the sun, you're no different than anyone else.

The good news, especially in this case, is that treatments for skin cancer have become very effective. The big melanoma on the farmer's back was routinely and successfully removed and treated.

Perhaps the reason why skin cancer might be considered an "underrated" cancer is that its death rate is considerably low. But that doesn't make it any less imperative to take it seriously. While more than one million Americans develop non-melanoma skin cancer each year, only about two percent of all cancer deaths result from skin cancer. Of those who develop the more serious melanoma—now the sixth most common malignancy in the United States—about 20 percent die.

Cover up

Most of the damage comes in the form of ultraviolet light, commonly referred to as UVA and UVB, which passes through the atmosphere and ultimately causes changes to our skin.

When a sunburn occurs, UVB rays directly damage the cell's DNA. In order to protect itself, the body gets rid of the damaged DNA by destroying the cell and dilating the blood vessels, giving the red glow of sunburn. The result of damaged DNA ultimately leads to skin cancer.

The only defense is to block the damaging rays from penetrating your skin.

People should start early and be diligent in the use of sunscreen. Use one that protects against both UVA and UVB, and has an SPF of between 15 and 30.

Added measures of protection include wearing hats and protective clothing and spending time outside early in the mornings, late in the afternoon or at night.

County equalization boards to meet in August

County equalization boards will meet Aug. 1 through Oct. 1 to equalize (adjust an assessment or tax to create a rate uniform with another) the assessed value of all acreage lands, city and town lots, other real property and personal property. The boards will meet as often as necessary during this time to complete their work (ACA 26-27-309). If a county's ratio of assessed-to-market value is out of compliance, the equalization board may meet after Oct. 1, but no later than the third Monday in November (ACA 26-27-311).

County equalization boards have two responsibilities: (1) to review and equalize overall county assessments as assessed by the assessor, and (2) to hear assessment appeals by property owners. The board begins the review of assessments on Aug. 1, when the county assessor delivers the completed assessment records to the county clerk, who serves as the secretary for the board. Assessment appeals from land owners begin no later than the second Monday in August (ACA 26-27-317).

Cities and towns have a part to play in deciding who sits as a member of the county equalization board. Cities and towns select one member of a five-member board (counties with a population less than 75,000) and two members of a nine-member board (counties with a population greater than 75,000) (ACA 26-27-303 and -304).

To select county equalization board members, city and town representatives within the county shall hold a meeting during the month of May of each year in which the terms of any of the members of the county equalization board shall expire (ACA 26-27-304(b)(2)(A)). The mayor of the city or town or his or her designee shall serve as the representative of his or her city or town (Id.). The mayor of the county seat shall be the chair of the meeting, and if there are dual county seats, the mayor of the larger of the two seats shall be the chair of the meeting (Id.). Those at the meeting shall select the member of the board via majority vote, and each city or town shall be entitled to one vote (Id.). No action shall be taken unless a quorum is present. A majority of all of the representatives of all cities and incorporated towns in the county shall constitute a quorum (Id.).

Information for this article comes from Arkansas Property Tax Equalization and Appeal System, a publication of the Assessment Coordination Department. # Help available for successful grants

With the help of the League, Legacy Consulting and the Grant Book Company, there's no need for cities and towns to reinvent the wheel when it comes to successful grant writing.

By Chad Gallagher

Grant writing is both an art and a science. Like most other skills, it is developed over time, improved with practice and enhanced by a wide range of tools, training and professional development. A successful grant application is within reach. A variety of things can be done to strengthen a grant application.

Preparation prior to applying for a grant is a very important key to success. Developing a thorough community needs assessment and a creating a community blueprint are key components to properly preparing for successful grant writing. These are, of course, also terrific tools for overall community development.

Once you've identified a specific grant need, it is important to begin an effective search for matching grant opportunities. This has been made easy for Arkansas municipalities thanks to the Grant Book Company. Publishers Joann Smith and Kevin Smith take the hard work out of grant research. The database at www.thegrantbook.com is a tremendous tool and is searchable by topic, agency or keyword. Every city should browse it often. Regularly updated and full of details, the book functions as a one-stop center for grant opportunities in Arkansas.

Once you've identified a matching grant opportunity and you begin to prepare an application, there are several things that can help you improve the quality of your application. To begin, take time to become familiar with the granting organization. Doing your homework will help you write a successful application. Read the entity's mission statement and program goals. Take notice of their priorities, program language, press releases and budget. Talk with key staff members and do not be afraid to ask questions. Successful grant recipients reflect well on the agencies and organizations offering funds. A successful recipient is the vehicle through which the agency can achieve its goals.

Another helpful step in preparing an application is to review a list of successful projects. This list will help you see the priorities of the agency and the type of projects they've funded. Review the successful applications. While your project must be authentic and unique to your community, there is no need to reinvent the wheel. Use these previously funded applications as a roadmap or template for your own application. When possible contact the successful recipients and ask for guidance. After you've read multiple successful applications you will have a better feel for the agency and what it considers important in its approval process.

A lack of preparation is one of the main reasons that grant applications are not successful. Your preparation efforts will greatly strengthen the likelihood of receiving funding for your project. The League has gone to great lengths to ensure that Arkansas municipalities are given a leg up in competing for grant dollars. All cities and towns should take advantage of the grant services provided to League members. As a member of the League, municipalities not only have access to The Arkansas Grant Book, but also to technical grant assistance as well. Legacy Consulting will assist any League member with grant applications. Every city is entitled to an annual site visit in your community and unlimited off-site support with grant applications and community development projects. Legacy regularly assists member cities with grants, including proof-reading applications and offering suggestions and guidance to strengthen an application. Help is available for the entire grant process!

The League also sponsors regional grant workshops at no charge for municipal members. These day-long workshops provide a voluminous amount of information that will strengthen your city's likelihood of success in grant writing. To host or attend one of these workshops or to learn more about grant services and assistance available to your municipality, contact me at chad.gallagher@legacyincorporated.com or at 501-580-6358.

New law gives trails boost

The new Wildlife Observation Trails Grant Program, signed into law this year, means more trail funding for cities and towns.

By Terry Eastin

Thanks to the efforts of state Reps. Robert Moore (Arkansas City) and Lance Reynolds (Quitman), legislation was passed in 2009 to provide for the development of a new pilot trail grant program funded by the Arkansas Game & Fish Commission and administered by the Arkansas Department of Parks and Tourism. The bill was filed with 60 members of the House of Representatives listed as co-sponsors and supporters of the legislation and passed both the House and Senate with zero nay votes. Gov. Mike Beebe signed the bill into law in late March.

With federal trail grant funding reductions and limited available resources for trail grants in Arkansas, this pilot program, entitled the Wildlife Observation Trails Grant Program, represents a new funding opportunity for cities, counties and nonprofit organizations engaged in the development of local and wilderness trails. The program is designed to promote the enjoyment of the natural, and scenic beauty, resources, and the observation of wildlife in Arkansas. Based on the desire to promote growth in the tourism sector and the economy through environmentally sound tourism development, the new grant program also offers a means to assist Arkansans with developing better health through increased physical activity.

A wildlife observation trail is a route designed to promote conservation and management of wildlife resources, and to promote tourism and economic development through the enjoyment, use, protection and improvement of the natural resources of Arkansas. The Department of Parks and Tourism will require grant applicants to provide assurances that a right-of-way or easement for public use for a minimum of 10 years is secured, in addition to providing assurances that the trail will be in operation and maintained for the same number of years. Projects must conform to the goals established in the Statewide Comprehensive Recreation Plan or the Arkansas Trails Plan, promote tourism and economic development, and be in a location that is attractive for wildlife observation. When designating grant recipients, the Department of Parks and Tourism shall give more consideration to the location and design of a trail that is assessed to be a tourism attraction, promotes economic development and designed to have particular appeal to youth for optimal wildlife observation.

The pilot program, which will be ready to go in six to 12 months, will offer $1 million for fiscal year 2009-2010 and $1 million for fiscal year 2010-2011. Revenue from the Game & Fish Commission for the pilot program will be derived from oil and gas leases in the Fayetteville shale. The Game & Fish Commission and the Department of Parks and Tourism will review the pilot program every two years and assessment of the benefits provided to Arkansans through the program's execution. Maximum grant awards are limited to no more than $100,000. Eighty percent of the funding will be made eligible to cities and counties. The remaining 20 percent will be available to nonprofit organizations and state agencies.

According to Richard Davies, executive director of the Department of Parks and Tourism, the popularity of trails in Arkansas has grown significantly in recent years.

"Where once requests for tourism information relating to trails was secondary to other tourism information requests," Davies said, "now requests for trails information have become a priority question by the public at-large."

Cities, counties and nonprofit organizations, whose prior funding requests over the last 15 years have been approved at a rate of 28 percent of total funding requests, stand to gain significantly from the new program. It is up to all of us to ensure the complete success of the pilot projects in the hopes the funds will be reauthorized—and possibly increased—in the years to come.
